

To Whom It May Concern:

In September 2009 Voltaire Engineering performed an Energy Audit on our house located at 4718 Trailmark Loop in Colorado Springs. The audit was performed by Voltaire owner Dan Rosenbaum and he was extremely accommodating when I asked to accompany him through the audit. Dan was very thorough and professional in explaining the audit process, answering my questions, and in conducting the audit. The audit also included a detailed report that showed us a potential annual cost savings of almost $300 per year if we fixed some of the issues that he found.

The audit included full measurements of the house both inside and out, a test that pressurized the house to show air infiltration, and a test that pressurized the air ducts to show leakage from the furnace. Dan was able to show me with a "smoke test" where air was leaking through windows that I thought were sealed very well, and also where the air ducts were leaking into the garage. Additionally, he showed me leakage in a roughed-in chimney area in the basement where a substantial amount of air was leaking.

The audit report that we received was 26 pages and included easily understandable text that explained areas that could be addressed to save energy as well as charts, graphs and tables with supporting data. Dan also included a rough itemized estimate of the cost in materials to repair the major issue areas.

I highly recommend Dan Rosenbaum & Voltaire Engineering for anyone contemplating an Energy Audit. The audit was through, Dan provided a clear explanation of the audit process, answered all of my many questions to my utmost satisfaction, and provided a detailed report explaining the findings and showing how upgrading some insulation and caulking some windows could save quite a bit of money. Please call if there are any questions.

Sincerely
Kris L. Davis
